

5 Reasons Vegetables and Fruit Really Matter

Establishing healthy eating patterns at a young age is very important!

1. They help kids grow

Vegetables and fruit are packed with healthy vitamins and minerals – such as vitamins A, C, E, and potassium that kids need to be healthy.

2. They fight disease

By learning to love veggies now, kids will build a lifelong habit that can help lower their risk of developing heart disease, high blood pressure, and some cancers later in life.

3. They help hydrate

Kids don't have to get all their water from a cup – fruit and many vegetables including lettuce and carrots, contain plenty of it.

4. They are nourishing

Kids who eat a variety of veggies and fruit prepared in a healthy way, have healthier diets. Vegetables and fruit help fill kids up, leaving less room for less nutritious choices.

5. They're packed with fibre

Fibre makes kids feel full and prevents constipation. Eating a high-fibre diet also means your child may be less likely to develop heart disease and high cholesterol later in life. Most kids get only about half as much fibre as they need.

Canada's Food Guide recommends that we:

- Include plenty of vegetables and fruits in our meals and snacks
- Try making half of the plate vegetables and fruit
- Have vegetables and fruit more often than juice
- Replace juice with water
